

Condé Nast Traveler

8/ 10

Share Grid View

Szeged, Hungary

Hungary's fourth-largest city is also home to its most prestigious university, the University of Szeged. Every July and August, the city's central Dóm square is turned into a massive performance venue for the annual Open-Air Festival. The city is well regarded for its cuisine (and the local paprika), so try specialties like the spicy, freshwater-fish stew Halászlé and Szeged's world-famous salami brand, Pick. Hungary is known for its bath and sauna culture, and a great way to experience it is by staying at the Hotel Forrás, where guests can visit the large adjacent spa complex.

Witold Scrypczak / Getty

CALDER QUINN

Man living in New York City.

SHARE THIS SLIDESHOW

MORE ON CALDER QUINN

AROUND THE WEB

Powered by ZergNet

This American Park is Covered in Diamonds That You Can Keep

Roadtrippers.com

The World's Most Terrifying Platforms & Observation Decks

10best.com

Exploring One of Ohio's Most Terrifying Urban Legends

Roadtrippers.com

The Most Miserable Places to Live in the World

Thrillist.com